New Sanctuary Consecration At Mowatt Methodist Church

by Ralph Webb

The consecration of the new sanctuary of the Mowatt Memorial United Mehodist Church will take place on Sunday, March 22 at 3 p.m. Present with the pastor, Reverend Ira C. Keperling, will be Bishop D. Frederick Wertz, who will bring the message and conduct the act of consecration.

40 Ridge Rd., has been a part of the Greenbelt community since 1946. Prior to that time, the midweek Methodist worship services were conducted in private homes by visiting ministers with Sunday meetings conducted by guest preachers at Center School. On November 8, 1946 the Methodist congregation met for the first time in a small wooden chapel purchased from Model City on the University of Maryland campus. Funds for the purchase were donated by Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Mowatt in memory of their son, Lt. Frank G. Mowatt, a much decorated bomber copilot killed in his 31st mission over Germany in 1944.

In February 1949, the present four-acre site was purchased from the federal government. The "first unit" of the new church was built in 1955. This was to be the educational portion of the church, but also served as the sanctuary for more years than originally had been planned. For years, the building fund for the construction of the sanctuary portion had been slowly growing. Finally, in 1978, the building committee under the leadership of Al Cousin and Reverend Clifton Cunningham, and with the help of many faithful and hardworking members of the congregation, undertook a major effort to complete the church. By a combination of a generously sup-

> The 220,000 square foot Greenway Center was developed by Western Development Corporation of Washington, D. C. The property was annexed by the city on July 5, 1979. At the time of annexation, the city estimated that the shopping center could eventually bring Greenbelt at least $50.000 a year in tax revenues. This estimate was based on the property's being valued at 6 million dollars. (It did not accoufor inflation nor the increased property values since July 1979).

Neighbors Love Greenbelt Park

by Virginia Beauchamp

Something like a love feast took place Friday evening, March 6, at the regional headquarters building of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission on Kenilworth Ave. Participants were staff members from Greenbelt Park, who had called a public hearing on plans for future changes in the 1100-acre national park, and citizens of nearby municipali-

Many of the latter had been shocked by a Washington Post article the day before in which reporter Paul Hodge indicated that among several options for the park's future was a possibility that the Reagan administration might favor removing the park from its federal jurisdiction under the National Park Service and turning it over to the state or to the bicounty agency that hosted the meeting, the M-NC-PPC. Whatever comments individual and organizational speakers might have about the four proposed plans for the park, all seemed unanimous that the park's best hope was to remain right where it was administratively, under the Park Service.

A strong round of applause showed the sentiments of the audience in the packed hearing room when New Carrollton's Mayor Jordan Harding said his city favored the park's continuation under the NPS. Harding commended the park staff as "fantastic in their cooperation with the surrounding communities."

Two or three speakers promised to lead citizen protest groups and write-in campaigns to Congressional representatives if any effort were made to remove the park from federal jurisdiction. One Congressional hopeful, Reuben Spellman, declared candidate for his wife's recently vacated 5th District seat, spoke out in favor of continued Park Service maintenance.

Throughout the hearing, park superintendent Thomas McFadden made clear his interest and that of his staff in coordinating planning with the expressed needs and desires of people in the surrounding communities. When various speakers commented on a too-late notification of the March 6 meeting to solicit responses of the membership in groups they represented, McFadden expressed his willingness to meet with such groups at times and places of their own choosing. He acquiesced easily as well to the request of the City of Greenbelt, in a letter from City Manager James K.

Giese that was read by Recreation Dept. employee George Rogala, to hold open the period for written public response to the proposed changes to 60 days instead of the 30 previously announced.

Before any audience response was heard, however, park Management Assistant James D. Hankins gave a slide presentation of aerial views of the park. The pictures, taken by helicopter from every possible angle around the park's circumference, stressed its singular value as a green enclave within what has become a wholly urban setting.

The backyards of the Kingswood Subdivision of New Carrollton form the park's eastern boundary. The development of the Greenway Shopping Center and the Golden Triangle along both sides of Greenbelt Rd. close off its northern boundary, and Kenilworth Ave. and Good Luck Rd. bound it on the west and south respectively. The Baltimore-Washington Parkway cuts through the park itself, separating the undeveloped eastern section from the portion used by campers, picnickers, joggers and cyclists. Each of these roads has become a major high-speed traffic artery, making access into the park more and more diffiult. Most of these changes have occurred since 1967, when the last set of proposals for improvements to the park were presented.

In its current state, the park has several continuing problems that the proposed design changes hope to address. These were listed by Lillian Rummel, National Park Service planner: access limited to one entrance (the Good Luck Rd. entrance having been closed off to eliminate high speed commuter traffic); safety and vandalism problems, especially at the group campground (the former Camp Conestoga); rundown picnic areas, especially the Laurel area; double and contradictory use of the headquarters building as both a police interrogation post and a park information center; and trails which are difficult See PARK, n. 8, col. 1

Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center To Hold Second Annual Meeting

by Konrad Herling

The Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center will hold its second annual membership meeting, Thursday, March 26, 7:30 pm at the Utopia Theatre. Elections for vacancies on the board, a status report of the Arts Center, a projected budget and priorities for the coming year will be the highlights of the agenda. Only current members may vote for board candidates or run as a candidate. Wine and cheese will be served.

One point to be expressed at the membership meeting will be the misperception of Greenbelters that the artistic and financial Annual Meeting success of the Arts Center is as sured. Due to diminishing budget. the basic expenses of rent and utilities are in fact being felt more acutely. At its last board meeting, board member Trix Whitehall said. "There are people who have been slaving away to produce this play ("Wait Until Dark") and only 50 people show up on Saturday night. It's very Vice President disheartening." John Ward added: "The community must realize that without its support, both at the ticket booth and through active participation on the various committees, that the Art Center's chances for long term success are vastly dimin ished. Residents may renew member ships at the March 26 meeting For those who are not now members, membership contributions will be accepted prior to the meeting enabling one to vote. Anyone interested in running for a board vacancy may submit a resume to Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center P.O. Box 439, before March 23. For more information, call 345 9369 or 474 7763.

Greenbelt's Metro Line: Still Alive

by Mary Lou Williamson

The Metro E-line or Greenbelt Line came through the Prince Georges County Council Tuesday with a secure 8 to 3 vote, but its travels during the day were not as smooth as that margin would suggest. Representatives of the city of Greenbelt were informed late Monday that it was very likely the votes needed for the E-line were "not there."

Filling the front row on one side, a worried WMATA staff, including its general manager, Richard Page, was prepared to walk out of the meeting if the council changed the recommended align ment. The audience was dominaed by University Park residents each bearing a large "Alternate 9" sign pinned to the shoulder. A small, but well organized Riverdale contingent sported smaller white and blue signs: 'Queens Chapel Road, E-Route Yes." They filled the front rows on the other side. The three Greenbelters present donned the Riverdale tags.

Council president Parris Glendening, leader of the fight for Alternate 9 - to realign the route through University Park minded the audience that the afternoon's business was not a public hearing and that they could not participate. He explained the proceedings - to vote on various segments of the alignment individually, to vote for the package thus put together and then to make additional amendments to the package, all as a committee of the whole. When all the problems had been resolved, the group would reconvene as the county council to take its final votes. This process required nine separate

In a similar manner, even the WMATA board had tightened the funding screws: if P.G. opted for any new studies or plans (there have been 38 to date), the county would have to foot the bill.

Individual Positions

Only half the council members participated actively during the three hour work session, although all eleven were present for the entire time. David Hartlove led the fight for the WMATA staff recommended alignment. William Amonett warning council that "it is time to fish or cut bait," seconded Hartlove's motions and spoke in their favor.

Aiding Glendening in his effort to gain acceptance of the modfications asked by University Park residents was Gerald Mc-Donough. The two refused to buy WMATA's argument that the increased costs associated with new environmental impact statements and development of new plans and the increased capital and operating expenses likely to result from realignment could threaten the future of the E-line.

Ann Lombardi took a middle position. She was anxious to shed as much light as possible on the decisions to be made, but not willing in any way to jeopardize the line. She voted with Hartlove.

Fighting his own separate battle, Casula argued and voted against the E-line. After several votes had been taken, council member Sue Mills joined Casula and offered a motion to cancel the E-line altogether. They received no support. Outraged by their thrust, Lombardi appeared to speak for the other members of the council when she said, "In no way can I support your motion. Metro is a pipeline to development for this county, bringing jobs for our people. We need that shot in the arm. If we (as members of the county council) cannot promote Metro in the most positive way we can, there is no point in our being elected."

The Votes

The first vote proved to be no problem. Increases in both capital and operating expenses were easily avoided as council voted 10 to 1 not to move a portal near Ager Rd. Only Casula opposed the motion.

The most hotly contested issue

Casula's Statement

(Following are excerpts of statement by County Councilman Frank Casula explaining his vote on the Metro-E Line. Casula represents the first district including Greenbelt.)

My reason for voting against the Metro "E" Route in 1978 has not changed today. I strongly believe now as I did then, that the construction of Metro in this corridor, already served by B&O Commuter Rail to Metro Union Station, is a blatant waste of taxpayers money.

The real issue is not one line over the other but is Metro the best and most cost effective way to provide public transportation for your tax dollars. I say it is not, and I am not alone. The Reagan administration is also questioning the cost effectiveness of Metro.

. . their stations will be plagued with crime; and their transportation system will not encourage citizens to abandon their cars as it was intended to do.

Well for all the citizens in this county who feel Metro is wasteful spending; who do not want their communities disrupted; who do not buy the myth that Metro is the answer to our transportation problem; who do not feel Metro bus drivers should get four cost-of-living increases a year; who do not want high property taxes; and who supported TRIM I cast my vote for you.

As a life long Greenbelt resident now residing at 128 Northway with wife, Elizabeth, and four children, I have been a member of Twin Pines for approximately 23 years. While living in New Jersey I served on the Board of Education, Planning Board, Industrial Commission, Water Commission and was President of the Homeowners Association and the Swim and Recreation Club of Candlewood. I transferred to the Washington Office of Arthur Young in 1974 but for the past two years have been employed with Arthur Andersen and Company as a Principal in Management Consulting. I am a member of A.I.C.P.A., New York Society of C.P.A.'s and D.C. Institute of C.P.A.'s. My main areas of concentration regarding financial consulting services include long range planning, budgeting, accounting, cost accounting, project cost control, cash management, financial feasibility studies, acquisition reviews and liquidations. I have provided these services to most major industries with a concentration in banking, manufacturing, petroleum, airlines, telecommunications and electronics. Financial Institutions are and will continue to be confronted with the following challenges: reduced regulations, increased com petition, expanding services, rapidly changing technology, erratic economic conditions which create gyrating interest rates and flows of funds. I feel that because of my 21 years as a management consultant, who has advised more than 20 financial institutions on a wide range of financial matters, I will be able to provide the Twin Pines depositors with assistance in confronting these challenges.

Council Tends To Chores in Short Meeting,

by Bill Rowland

The city council, in an unusually short meeting on March 2, disposed of its agenda in only a few minutes over an hour. New business included two voting-related subjects, the proposed Lake Park Master Plan, rules of procedure for city boards, and benefits for city employees. Cable TV also received brief attention.

Cable TV

Council took note of the fact that the Prince Georges County Cable Television Commission has received 13 formal applications to provide cable services to residents. Five of these proposals are for the northern part of the county of which Greenbelt is a part. After a process of evaluation and public hearings, the Cable Television Commission expects to make its recommendations to the county council in July for the award of a franchise for each of the two parts of the county.

The city has a copy of each of the five northern-area applications. Those applications will be considered by the city as it reviews the proposals expected to be received as a result of the Request for Proposals issued jointly by the cities of Greenbelt and New Carrollton during February. The neighboring cities have given themselves the option of adopting a two-cities cable TV system, or of each adopting its own system, or of joining the county system.

Voting Registration

An amendment to the city code regarding voter registration by mail for voting in city elections was introduced for first reading as recommened by the city's Board of Elections. The new rule would permit only individuals who are not registered to vote to ask for a voter registration form for themselves. In the past, persons involved in election campaigns have been able to ask the city clerk to mail registration forms to numerous residents who have not in fact been interested in registering to vote. This practice has meant additional workload for the city clerk and added expense for the city.

North End Polling Place

With North End Elementary School scheduled to close its doors at the end of June, the council has asked the city's Board of Elections to recommend alternate polling places for residents who in the past have voted at the school.

Lake Park Master Plan

The city staff recommendations to council toward development of master plan for Greenbelt's Lake Park, most of which were presented in January, have now been completed by addition of the staff's proposals for vehicle and pedestrian entrance to the park.

The staff considered a number of alternative locations for the vehicle entrance from Crescent Road, ranging from a position opposite Ridge Road to one opposite Lastner Lane. The final proposal. in agreement with the recommendation of City Engineer John Emler, is that the entrance stay at about its present location but be improved to provide better flow and separation of traffic and a more attractive appearance.

The recommended design would lessen the sharpness of the turn that eastbound motorists have to make when turning right into the park. It would also add one or two landscaped traffic islands to separate incoming and outgoing vehicles. Ornamental landscaping would be placed on either side of the entrance. The unsightly dirt shoulder area east of the entrance would be eliminated and the telephone booth now in that area would be relocated to a point beside the lake parking lot.

The staff has also proposed an improved pedestrian entrance to the park, to be located opposite Lastner Lane and making use of an existing path which follows an old roadway into the park. The staff considered a pedestrian underpass under Crescent Road but rejected that idea because of design problems and high cost.

City council referred the additional staff recommendations regarding the Lake Park to the city's Park and Recreation Advisory Board and the Advisory Planning Board. Council plans to hold a public hearing on the entire Lake Park Master Plan proposal, probably within the next month or so

Rules of Procedure

Council had noted recently that not all city advisory boards and committees have adopted standing rules of procedure. Council had agreed that each board and committee should have at least some general guiding rules to govern the conduct of its business. An ordinance was therefore introduced which will pertain to any city board or committee, whether or not it already has established rules of procedure.

The proposed ordinance provides that in the absence of a standing rule to govern a procedural matter, "the customary rules of procedure established by approved practice in American parliamentary bodies shall be followed." The ordinance also provides that the board or committee chairperson will normally decide procedural issues, but leaves room for the board or committee members present to make the decision. Administrative Leave

The question of granting administrative leave to city employees injured on the job has been a recurrent problem for both the city manager and the council, both in terms of whether to grant and how much to grant. A resolution introduced by council is intended to relieve at least part of the difficulty.

Present city policy provides that the city manager may grant up to 30 days administrative leave to an employee unable to work because of on-the-job injury and further provides that the city council may approve additional administrative leave in excess of the original 30 days.

Under the proposed resolution, council would grant additional administrative leave only if the jobinjured employee is in a medical institution, or if the employee has injury-related expenses not covered by workmen's compensation,

Sick Leave

Assistant City Manager Dennis Piendak reported to council on a procedure whereby the city can exclude from social security deductions the sick leave pay of an employee who is ill. This would result in additional compensation for a sick employee, and would also free the city from its share of the social security contribution. The council passed a motion that will permit this procedure to be adopted by the city.

Utopia's "Wait Until Dark" Provides Engrossing Evening for Small Charge

by Virginia Beauchamp

The setting for the current thriller, "Wait Until Dark," which is playing through March 29 at the Utopia Theatre, is almost as important as the characters themselves. In the Greenwich Village basement, staged impressively by designer Tom Schreiber, various pieces of kitchen equipment and lighting fixtures, switches, and a fuse box have their own roles to play. The "dark" of the title is in part artificial.

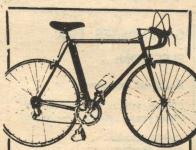

The plot concerns a blind young woman, Susy Hendrix, whose life becomes entangled with three gangster figures when her husband naively agrees to transport a doll from a Toronto woman to a supposed little girl in New York City. The doll, as we learn early in the complicated plot, contains a packet of heroin destined for the big-city market. How blind Susy, with the aid of a little girl in the apartment upstairs, is able to outguess the three intruders and protect herself in an element in which her blindness is an asset instead of a handicap is the story of the play.

At the Greenbelt Players' per formance on Saturday night, March 14 the role of the inventive Suzy was convincingly played by Claudia Schreiber. As she groped for light switches and stumbled across unexpected objects on the floor, one could well believe that she could not see. Craig Mooring, in the demanding role of Harry Roat, Jr., moved easily among several different dialect characters he impersonated at Susy's expense, and Melissa Levine was effective as the independent and assertive child, Gloria.

Marty Harris, as Sgt. Carlino. and John Jacobs, who played Mike Talman, gave acceptable performances. Michael Schreiber. as Susy's husband, Sam, was, unfortunately, not always audible in his small role.

Special note should be made of the stage crew, who with one exception managed all the complicated lighting cues with singular attentiveness.

But at the Saturday night performance, one important piece of the stage lighting created a serious problem for at least several members of the audience. This was when Susy, apparently inadvertently, turned up a gooseneck lamp, which was the stage's sole source of light, so that it burned directly into the eyes of the audience. We found ourselves having to shade our eyes with our programs, which blotted out significant pieces of action. In fact, at the play's end we were neither able to see nor to hear just what had happened at the crucial moment. We trust that this problem will not recur in later performances.

The Greenbelt Players provide an engrossing evening for a modest charge. On the evening when I saw it, it was not as sinister as perhaps it should be in the tensest moments, but it was otherwise fast-paced and well directed by Angela Schreiber and Lou Chad-

Other performances are sched uled for Friday and Saturday, March 20 and 21, 27 and 28 and Sunday, March 29. Bruce Fleshman is double-cast as Mike Talman, Kenny Holl as Sam Hendrix, and Efrat Levi as Gloria. Michele Chang and Janet Schreiber-Cripe are also cast in the demanding role of Susy.

Crime Prevention in GHI

by Sandy Smith

While trying to address these problems, Rummel stressed, park planners were aware of community opposition to any elaborate development of the facility. Thus the three proposed new alternatives involve only minimal, lowscale changes. No recreational facilities like the golf course once proposed and strongly opposed locally have been included. Option I calls for no change from the present design and maintenance functions.

Speaking for the New Carrollton city council, Mayor Harding favored alternative 3, which proposes development of a picnic area and ball fields in the park's eastern section. But Kingswood residents John Ceci and David Cartier strongly opposed that option, as did College Park resident Clara Goin, of the Prince Georges Environmental Coalition, Several other speakers felt that providing ball fields for the recreational use of their own residents should be the responsibility of individual municipalities.

Design features that drew favorable attention were a proposal for a stable for rangers' horses to make easier the task of patrolling park trails, a suggestion to provide vehicular access off Kenilworth Ave. instead of the heavily trafficked Greenbelt Rd. and Good Luck Rd., maintaining a group camp ground but moving it from the difficult-to-monitor southern corner, and opening of a culvert access under the B-W Parkway to the eastern portion of the

Other speakers favored more nature trails and bicycle trails, a nature center off Good Luck Rd. in the park's eastern section, and an amphitheatre in the bulldozed area at the south end of the Jaeger tract where Westchester Park is located. Several approved a proposal to close off Park Center Rd. in the middle as a bicycle trail, allowing access to the campground only from Good Luck Rd. and into the picnic area only from Greenbelt Rd. Others opposed such changes, desiring only improved maintenance for what is already in place. In any case, all seemed to concur with a description of the park by Greenbelter Bruce Bowman-that it is "a very necessary facility."

"We're not asking you to be afraid, but to be aware," was the message of Officer Chuck Watkins, speaking to a small but interested group of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. residents. The occasion was a recent crime prevention program sponsored by the Greenbelt City Police Department and GHI. Officer Watkins spoke about the importance of being observant, knowing the community and neighbors, and taking the time to notify the police department if one suspects something is wrong. The community must be involved to successfully reduce crime.

Officer Dave Fulghum demonstrated the best kind of locks for doors-double bolt-and how to use a 10-penny nail driven into a window at a 10-degree angle to provide an inexpensive locking device for a window. He said casement windows were virtually impossible to secure. There were also questions for GHI management. These concerned the types of replacement locks GHI is currently using, would GHI staff still have access when double key locks are used, who has access to the pass keys for GHI homes. what system of identification for workers involved in rehabilitation is in place, and others. These questions have been submitted to GHI and the answers will appear in the first edition of the GHI newsletter to be published shortly. Other questions on crime prevention can be submitted to Dennis Lewis, Coordinator Member Services, GHI.

Police Blotter

As a result of investigation, two more cases of breaking and entering were closed with the arrest of two local juveniles. The incidents took place on Laurel Hill Road and Ridge Road.

The Department received two different reports of wallet thefts from ladies' purses while they were shopping in grocery stores. One took place at Greenway Center and the other at the Beltway Plaza. Women are reminded to keep their purses in sight. Do not leave them in the shopping

Three attempts to steal van trucks from the parking lot at Lakeside North were unsuccess-

Pfc. Murray discovered a stolen motorcycle and arrested a local juvenile.

As a result of a fight call in front of 52 Crescent Road, a disorderly male subject was arrested and charged with assault.

Director Curtis, who served as

RehablssuesDominate GHI Board Meeting

by Sandra Surber Smith

A short agenda and absence of controversial issues brought the March 12 meeting of the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. board meeting to a 10:30 adjournment. The board approved a revised loan commitment with the Maryland Community Development Administration (CDA), clearing the way for closing on the loan in April. A number of administrative matters were handled and a comprehensive report from the Ad Hoc Committee on Rehabilitation Complaints was presented.

CDA Loan

Manager Ken Kopstein describea the minor modifications to the loan agreement which CDA has agreed to and which he recommended the board approve. These modifications include a change in the term of the loan from 20 years to up to 30, provision of certain management reports to CDA, and a requirement that GHI maintain at least 20 percent of the housing units available for occupancy by individuals of low or moderate income. If it is determined that GHI homes are "owner-occupied" some of the requirements associated with the latter provision may be waived. Kopstein then mentioned the six houses which GHI owns and rents and recommended that GHI consider selling these properties to the current tenants or others. Director Hogensen asked how long the tenants had occupied these houses and expressed concern over their willingness or ability to purchase. Others suggested many different methods of selling and financing and the final decision was that management would explore this issue with the present tenants and report to the board.

Rehabilitation Complaints

Susan Gervasi read the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on Rehabilitation Complaints. Its complaints were in three areas: conduct of workers; sump pump problems; and inaction, slow action, or inadequate work. Installation of showers in non-waterproofed bathrooms was also questioned. D. A. Davis, Rehabilitation Project Director, will respond to the committee in writing by the next meeting. At this time, several members commented on work well done.

Director Curtis moved that a weekly rehabilitation complaint report be prepared and that it show what action has been taken on each complaint. The complaints would remain on this cumulative listing until the board is satisfied. This motion passed. Staff Architect, Stan Sersen, suggested a standardized form for recording each complaint, and manager Kopstein mentioned that a perpetual log is now in place in the trailer for recording complaints as they are made.

The board instructed management to review the electric heat project in operation with one member who is due for a two-year evaluation, to look into the status of later agreements, and reports back.
